

Mr. Naveau contacted our office for the first time. He left me a voicemail stating he received our letter and was now ready for an inspection. I drove to Mr. Naveau's house to meet with him. Upon my arrival I noted he had black plastic tile attached to his down spouts. I met him in the driveway and he started showing me the tile he "capped off". I could see dried concrete in the top of the tile. I said "Please tell me you did not fill those tile with concrete." He replied "No, no. I put in the three feet of stone first just like the letter told me." I explained to Mr. Naveau that he should have called us first, like the letter instructed, because he may have just damaged his footer tile. He stated he didn't know what a footer tile was. I explained to him what it was and how they typically work. He seemed to think it would be okay because Everdry had fixed his basement and it's been dry ever since. I explained the possible problems he may have caused and he said it didn't matter because he was getting divorced and the house was going up for sale. He then asked me if this meant he was done. I explained the purpose of the letter was to get the down spout water to discharge on the ground. He accomplished that, but may have caused himself further problems down the road. His concern was that he would not get any more letters from the City. I told him the only letter he would get is a confirmation letter, if he requested one. He refused as long as I assured him that I had proper documentation showing he complied with the letter.
