Mr. Tandy:

There is something that I would like to call to your attention.

Four seasons of the year--during or following rain, snow, mist, or any kind of precipitation at all--pedestrians are showered from above when they walk along the Murphy Store from the Washington Street Corner-North on Perry. This is a hazzard and I am wondering if the overhang on the roof might be deteriorating to such an extent that sometime a piece might fall down on someone. Even if the overhang is sound--it evidently needs some kind of repair as you can be showered long after precipitation.

Landowners are expected to keep sidewalks in good repair--but to me, a roof that is old and deteriorating, is even more of a hazzard for anyone passing below.

Could this be called to the attention of the owner of the building, or possibly checked out by the building inspector--or whoever should check it out?

Thank You.
